INTRODUCTION

San Francisco's Bayview neighborhood is tucked into an isolated Southeast corner of the city. Most people don't have a reason to go there. They only know what they see on the news — violence, drugs, and poverty. But, there is much more to Bayview — people, sights, and stories that people never see or hear about.

For eight weeks in the summer of 2013, eight Bayview teenagers documented their community through photography. This is their home, their friends, their families. This is their Bayview.

I see how the community is uniting Im proud to be a part of it.

If you could tell the world one thing about Bayview, what would it be?

"Come visit."

The people in Bayview believe in me, even when no one else will.

We are a diverse group of people who look for the best in others and ourselves. We take care of each other and it's always sunny.
